Q&A on Viewing Tips

- Q When can you see the range covered in snow?
 A From mid-October to May.
- Q What time of day is best for viewing the range?
 A From 12:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m.
* In the morning, the mountains are backlit, but around noon they are frontlit, making them appear clearer and more distinct. The period just before sunrise, when the mountains stand out clearly in silhouette, and the time around 4:30 p.m. in winter, when the sky turns pink at sunset, are also highly recommended.
- Q When is the best time of year to see the range at its most beautiful?
 A From December to March, when there is a good amount of snow.
* Please note that winter weather in Toyama can be quite unstable with many cloudy, rainy and snowy days. Although sunny weather is ideal for enjoying the mountain views, there are usually only one or two sunny days per week during winter. On those rare sunny days, the visibility improves significantly, increasing the chances of seeing the mountains clearly.
- Q Which direction can you view the range in?
 A To the southeast when viewed from Toyama City.
- Q What are the prime conditions for enjoying the best views of the mountains?
 A The prime conditions are perfectly or almost perfectly sunny days with few clouds and clear air. The best time of day is in the morning when temperatures tend to be lower due to radiative cooling.
* Please be sure to focus on driving and avoid being distracted by the stunning views of the Tateyama Mountain Range.
